Summary

Uncertainty has become the new normal for European philanthropy. These past two years, national associations have been living through two consecutive crises, navigating through fog, thunderstorms and occasional beams of sunshine. These occasional beams of sunshine were the tremendous level of mobilisation of funders and donors' networks in response to the pandemic and, most recently, to the war in Ukraine. We have seen unprecedented solidarity with Ukraine – from Warsaw to Lisbon, from Stockholm to Antalya. The Ukraine war is one of the deadliest and most devastating conflicts Europe has experienced since World War II.

This Summer Meeting will follow the first Philea Forum, dedicated to philanthropy's united action, and will offer a space for reflection and connection – so much needed after months when we were forced to collaborate from behind the screen.

We have built the programme on the experience we all had throughout the Covid-19 pandemic and more recently with the Ukraine crisis:

- What have we learned as national associations about how to tackle urgent crisis situations?
- What needs to change in the way we handle huge, systemic crises?

We will hear a couple of examples and have time to exchange emerging practices, trends and challenges in European philanthropy in order to use this safe space to surface learnings, new ideas and also broader questions that we need to tackle jointly.

Furthermore, we will dedicate a session to the protection of the enabling environment for civil society and philanthropy, something which has never been more urgent than it is today.

After an intense peer exchange and discussion, you are warmly invited to join us for a farewell dinner with wine and tapas.
